

Dear Reader,

I'm pleased to present the second NANO-CATHEDRAL newsletter.

It is an exciting time for our project, as we are entering our third and final year with on-site trials of our developed nano-materials. In this issue we will give you updates about the closure of the mid-term reporting period and upcoming events. Special focus is on the Oslo Opera House, which will host the Open Conference event on June 7th followed by our 5th technical meeting.

I hope you'll enjoy it.

Andrea Lazzeri | Project Coordinator

News from the Project

The mid-term reporting period was successfully closed during the meeting in Cologne last December.

Learn more

The new NANO-CATHEDRAL official poster and brochure have been published online, with updates from the first 18 months of the project.

Download them!

The 5th Technical Meeting and the Advisory Board Members Meeting will be held in Oslo in a few days, right after the Open Conference event.

Learn more on our Technical Meetings

Oslo Open Conference

At the suggestive Opera House, a conference to discover the latest news about NANO-CATHEDRAL project.

We will talk about:

- Challenges regarding maintenance and protection of Oslo Opera's Carrara marble.
- The results of the project so far, the products, the innovations.

Complete Program

Why Nanomaterials for Cultural Heritage?

Since '80s, the scientific research has been devoted to the development of nanomaterials to be applied in a wide range of fields, including the conservation of Architectural Heritage.

Keep Reading

Do you know all about Opera House?

Opera house is a result of an eight-year project and It received numerous international and architectural awards. It houses the Norwegian National Opera and Ballet.

Discover More

Upcoming events

21-23 June 2017 - Euronanoforum - La Valletta (Malta)

19-21 July 2017 - ANM 2017 - Alveiro (Portugal)

This project has received funding from the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme under grant agreement No 646178